LATE TELEGRAMS.

The Franco-Siamese Treaty. London, November 12 .- The publication of the Yellow Book on Siam has not allayed the opposition of the French Colonial purty

The Yellow Book covers the negotiations since 1893. Siam in 1900 refused to negotiate unless Chantabun was evacuated. M. Delcasse, on the 15th January, 1902, declared, that France would consider it an unfriendly act if Siam afforded facilities to foreign enterprises on the Mekong. The book concludes by saying that, as it was urgently necessary to close a matter wherein time was working against France, the Convention was signed on the 7th October last.

Lord Kitchener at Khartoum. November 8,-The native officers entertained General Lord Kitchener at Khartoum to-dev. Lord Kitchener said he was glad of an opportunity of thanking them for their good service under him which the suddenness of his departure in 1899 then prevented.

November 10.—General Lord Kitchener opened the Gordon College at Khartoum. He said he was satisfied with the progress made, and hoped, on his return from India, he would find the College firmly established on the lines originally conceived. The Arbitration on India's Military Charges. November 11 .- Lord George Hamilton mentioned yesterday evening that Lord Alverstone will act on the abritration between the India and the War Offices regarding increased pay to the soldiers.

Death of the Turkish

Ambassador. M. Bostaki, the Ottoman Ambassador to London, has died at Constantinople [Anthopoulos Pasha Costaki : Ottoman Ambassador at Court of St James since 1896; born at Constantinople. 1832; of Greek parentage; a Christian, Professor of Penal Law in the Ottoman Faculty of Law and Attorney-General by the Supreme Court, 1870-1880; Governor-General of Crete, 1888; Insignia and Star of the Osmanieh and Medjidie, in brilliants.

Russian Recrimination. November 9 .- The Novoe Vremye bitter-

y attacks M. Delcassé for favouring Germany, by his attitude regarding the Bagdad railway concession, at the expense of Russia. The Future of India. November 10.—Replying to various ques-

George Hamilton dwelt on the revival of prosperity in India, which was evidenced by the increase of revenue It has been decided to devote a million and a half sterling as a special grant for industries, provinces, and services which had suffered from the drought. The estimated surplus of the current year was upward of £1,800,000 sterling. He anticipated some increase in military expenditure. It was not improbable that it would be necessary to increase the number of white troops in India. Moreover, keeping our armaments on a level with the latest requirements of science, would probably necessitate some increase. However, military expenditure depended considerably upon the policy (? of other nations, or of Russia). Our policy neither changed nor varied. It was unaggressive; it was based on the principle of self-defence regulated by vigilant observance. The death of Abdur Rahman had in nowise affected our engagements with Russia, concerning respective epheres of action, intercourse, and influence; nor the principle underlying the understanding between ourselves and the ruler of Afghanistan. November 11 .- Lord George Hamilton, replying to further comments on that part of the Indian administration wherewith he was least satisfied, which related to the promotion of railways, said speedier machinery was needed. Mr Robertson, who was appointed in 1900 to investigate the management of Indian railways, has been to America, and is about to proceed to India to make a fina' report, whereon Lord Curzon will doubtless make suggestions, pro-bably in the direction of excluding the railway as far as possible from general administration and assigning it to experts.

He deprecated the remission of taxation till it was certain it would not be necessary to re-impose it. Sir M. Bhownagree advocated taking the opportunity of organisation by the Government of the new Colonies to remedy the grievances of Indians, and hoped Mr Chamberlain would deal with the questions.

on the spot. He urged, amid choers, the extension of Lord Carzon's term. The Standard pays a tribute to the Indian administration, but joins the Daily News and the Daily Chronicle in urging a reduction of the salt tax. Later.-Lord George Hamilton proceeded to explain that the Government gladly availed itself of the conclusion of peace to modify the previous decision, and it undertook the whole cost of the entertainment The Undersigned will be glad to underof the Indian guests. He said an inte-Departmental Committee had been apadjustments between the Treasury and the Indian Exchequer. The Coronation had a deeper significance for India than any part of the Empire. Lord George Hamilton also said that he had no conception, until he came in contact with the representatives from India of the depth and intensity of the loyalty and reverence of India for its sovereign. Both Burma Petroleum. Calcutta, Nov. 11 -The Bongal Chamber of Commerce publishes a letter dated today, refusing the request of the Standard Oil Trust agents to intervene with the Goapplication for a Burmah petroleum con-

Mr Libby, of the Standard Oil Company, of America, has addressed an important communication to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce concerning the governmental discrimination against the Standard Oil Company and emerican petroleum, and solicits attention to an international opisode of commerce, the gravity of which extends far beyond the immediate corporate or financial issues involved. Mr Libby submits the text of a communi-cation he addressed to the Government of India during his visit to Simla last July, in the course of which he says that about two years ago the attention of the Standard Oil Company was specially and frequently called to the possibility of rapidly mcreasing the patroleum production of Burmah; and at a period when our entire commerce east of the Suez Canal was under careful advisement the Standard Oil Company decided to send several experts to Burmah to study the patroleum situation there from the standpoint of production, transportation, manufacturing, and marketing. As a net outcome of the reports of the said experts the Standard Oil Company decided to venture a conservative investment in the petroleum industry of Burmali, not with the intention at the outset to take any part in production, but merely to construct a refinery and purchase crude oil from the many large or small producers and then allow the enterprise to naturally develop.

It is reported that the American Ambassador has asked for an explanation of the refusal of the Indian Government to allow the Standard Oil Company a footing in Burmah. It is understood that Lord Lansdowne

DE WET'S BOOK ON THE WAR. LONDON, November, 30, 1902.

De Wet's book on the late war in South Africa, which is dedicated to 'my follow subjects of the British Empire,' has been published. It is severely critical, but not acrimonious. It disparages Lord Roberts' generalship, which it declares was lacking in foresight: General Buller had to face by far the more difficult task. It apparently respects Lord Kitchener, but dubs his block-house system the block-head system. It ridicules the British scouting. It alleges British barbarities against women, children, and the aged, and, although cases are not specified, it says proofs can be produced in hundreds. It concludes with an appeal to the Boers to be loyal to Great Britain.

SUPREME COURT.

IN ORIGINAL JURISDICTION (Before His Honour Gir William Goodman.

Chief Justice). Tuesday, December 2) 1902.

'TANSAN' IN COURT. .

'Tansan,' described as 'a sparkling beverage, the product of a natural mineral spring, was exhibited in court in a dozen different samples, and its trade marks discussed by counsel. It was a motion on the part of Ea Shu and Co. to discharge an ex parte injunction granted J. C. Wilkinson of Japan, restraining the first-mentioned of Tadamura, from using the name 'Tansan' in description of their bottled mineral water sold under that name, and also from using a label which plaintiff alleged was protested by registration. The argument of the legal points at issue occupied the court during the forenoon. They are of considerable importance, the application in this generalising the word 'Tansan,' being

Mr Pollock, K.C., instructed by Mr Wilkinson (Messrs Wilkinson and Grist), appeared for Mr Wilkinson, and the defence was upheld by Mr Slade, instructed by Mr F. B. Deacon (Messrs Deacon and Hastings).

Mr Slade grounded his application on the fact that when the ex parte injunction was granted the defendant was not represented in court and had no opportunity of disproving the statements upon which the plaintiff relied and upon the strength of which the Chief Justice made the order of restraint. The label to the use of which by the defendants the plaintiff took exception, was stated in affidavit to be protected by registration. As a matter of fact that particular label was not registered. The plaintiff sought a monopoly of the word Tansan.' The Japanese court had decided that the word had a general, not a par-him open to criminal presecution under the Merchandise Marks Act. Mr Pollock-My friend' perhaps, knows more about the facts than I do, but I was under the impression that it was registered ticular significance. The plaintiff had Registered trade mark on the label, which was not registered, and this more fact left

His Lordship-I understand that there are two trade marks slightly different. Mr Polick-Yes. Of course, I only ventured the remark because my friend said we were liable to criminal presecution. His Lordship - When the motion was made I understood that Tansan was a special description of plaintiff's own, not a thing common to the trade.

Mr Slade-Quite so, my lord, That is why we more, now. We say that your ordship's order was made upon a representation, which was erroneous. In Japan Tansan is as common as sodu water is in England. Mr Pollock submitted that what the Japanese Court decided was utterly day, 29th ult., resulting in a victory for irrelevant, and all they knew was that it was part of a judgment-an extract from a decision which did not concern them, inasmuch as they were not trying the case de novo. He submitted that Tansan meant a particular thing which was the plaintiff's; that it was a name invented by the plaintiff; that people purchased it because it had, through its excellence, established by the plaintiff, become popular; 76 and that it had not yet come to be regarded in the wide range of meaning, according to which, for instance, whisky or soda were regarded. It had not ceased to 13 mean a particular thing, that particular thing being the beverage which plaintiff Total (for 3 wickets) ...... 149 had popularised. If these things were to he gone into, his lordship would, of course, have to consider the question of user in the Colony. 'It was possible that in Japan the word 'Tansan' might have become of more or less common use, so as to denote to the Japanese the general generic term of mineral water. But that did not bind Hongkong, and in Hongkong 'Tansan had not that general application. The 0 question would have to be fought of the reputation 'Tansan' had in the Colony. and what individual firm had acquired that 3 reputation. All the evidence they possessed went to show that Mr Wilkinson was

For instance. change of label by the defendant to attract from the plaintiff the trade of Hongkong. I have not got any such proof, and I cannot assume it. Mr Pollock-Of course, these are matters for the hearing, when the trial of the action comes on. We are prepared to give an undertaking as to damages, and the label used by defendant establishes prime facie right to go to the court and to continue the niunction in the meantime.

His Lordship said he had come to the charge the original order he had made tional trip will be made 10 minutes after and he did so with costs. He did the performance is finished but not before | not say, nor did he think, that the gentleman who made the affidavit, upon At 12.15 this morning, I arrived at the the strength of which the order was Ferry Co.'s Wharf, Hongkong, and was made, intended in any way to deceive or so swear unless they knew the subjectmatter of their deposition to be so-if the formed so and so.' There was no doubt

He did not think there was any question of damages arising from the discharge of the Mr Slade-No, it is a very small thing. His Lordship-Upon the second branch of the question I would like to hear you further, Mr Pollock, unless you would like this to adjourn it until the hearing. Mr Pollock pressed for the continuation of the injunction until the case comes on for trial. He could not bind his client to His Lordship-Do you give an undertaking. Mr Slade ? Mr Slade replied in the negative. The defendants were merely agents, and they didnot want to fun any risks. They admitted: that the use of similar labels would be unfair to the plaintiff, but what they objected to was the exclusive use by him of the word

His Lordship-Quite so. And you, Mr Pollock. If you claim the exclusive right of the word Tansan, it would seem rather a large order, would it not ? Mr Pollock-I am not prepared to concode anything. My slient might repudi-

LONDON LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.) LONDON, October 31.

Mr Chamberlain-carries with him into Africa the good wishes and admiration of all, even his continental enemies. Some of us are rather anxious about the personal risk that a man of his age and sedentary habits, entirely unaccustomed to travelling, must necessarily run in exchanging an English November for the South African summer. Johannesburg in January is as hot as Hongkong in July, but has the advantage in dryness. No thought of his own peril has crossed Mr Chamberlain's mind. The journey is a much more severe enterprise than his visit to America about the Fisherics question fifteen years ago, yet I doubt not he will do it cheerfully and come back as youthful as ever with his perennially cheerful smile, and as indefatigably bright as the blossom in his buttonhole. Energy is almost too mild a word for the Right Honourable Joseph. He is in tensely masterful. He turned Birmingham inside out thirty years ago, when he retired from the screw trade, and, since then, he has been an embodiment of the spirit of the times, an imperial radicalism. The late Laurente had the idea that-

'That man's the best Conservative Who lops the mouldered branch away.' Mr Chamberlain is not the man to wait for a branch to moulder. He has a dis ciplined impatience with whatever may be good enough but might be better, and if it took us into a war, for which our antagonists were readier than we were, it will not be applied to make rapid strides to a peaceful settlement for which we are readier than they are. It is a remarkable sign that the statesman who did not hesitate to say a couple of years ago that, had the war been his own, he would have regarded it as a feather in his cap, should now be going in the Cape's own warship, not to exult ever victories, 'to ride in triumph through Persepolis, but to reconcile the vanquished, and

The Tube schemes have collapsed for this year, not from any reluctance in the House of Commons to pass their, but purely and simply by the meannesses and quarrels of rival Company promoters. In the United States, from which most of these gentlemen hail, there is no branch of commerce more exploited by millionaires (millionaire is the superlative of thief, just as financier is the comparative) than railway schemes, and now they seem to be crossing the Atlantic to wage their unholy mao, with the support of Mr Detring wars over the body of the London citizen. and the advice of Mr Kingsley, late agent Sir Lowis McIver calls their transactions of the old company at Shanghai, who has shabby, dirty, stockbroking and quite un- come from England at Mr Chang Yenprecedented in the annals of the committees | mao's request, and has been staying for of the House. Sir Edward Sassoon stirred up our new Postmaster-General on Tuesday about the cable rates from Hongkong to England as being practically double of those from Hongkong to Russia, and received as a roply two quite charming pieces of geographical information ;-(1) That Hongkong is in China, and (2) that Russia and China are adjoining countries. To this was added the somewhat evasive statement that the Great Northern Company does not possess a monopoly of landing rights in any pany's scrip. The Chinese replied that lion, even for a toad, I should say, British territory. Cold comfort.

The Times is publishing excerpts from Mr Kruger's forthcoming memoirs. No critic will go to such a book for facts. The historical musfortune of the House of York was that the Lancastrians as the Tudors survived them, and in the person of Shakespeare wrote their history. What a character many estimable individuals would bear if Mr. Kruger's passionate diatribes were to be accepted as the annals of South Africa I

His friends, as angels he adorned 'em;

His foes, the devil had suborned 'em. The great value of the book will be its unconscious self-revelation of the author as a pathetic anachronism, a seventeenth century Dutch Calvinist, who ought to have been a Haarlem burgomaster during the rise of the Dutch Republic, but who lived a strenuous life among the unfamiliar law. circumstances of the nineteenth century. Politically, of course, he is dead now, and, without these memoirs, the twentieth century would find it difficult to believe that such a man had existed on its threehold.

Schleswick-Holstein has been Prussian ever since. While Bismarck lived, so strong was the feeling that such an event as the present visit of the Crown Prince of Denmark to Berlin would have been im possible. Now there are distinct signs of a reconciliation. Denmark would like to be neutralised in much the same way as Belgium. Prussia, on the other hand, is certain that the little Northern kingdom must eventually fall into her hands, and consequently cannot regard with equanimity the proposed sale of the Danish Antilles to the United States. She has a distinct object in keeping fat the bird she intends to swallow some day Our good King, who has proved himself an ardent peacemaker, may have suggested the possibility of such a visit. Certainly the amiable youth

Chang Chih-tung is evidently falling from grace. This appears from the anti-educational reaction to which you have called attention in Kwangtung. On the other hand, great things may be hoped from the appointment, to replace Sheng, the notorious, of Wu Ting-fang, a man whose patriotism is unquestionable, and who has the advantage of having taken thoroughly and kindly to Western education. The United States loses one of the most popular strangers within their gates, an admirable after-dinner speaker and a born diplomatist. He cannot have learned the best political economy in so protectionist a country, but it will at least be much saner and less narrow-minded than anything to which China has yet been accustomed. A NEW YEAR'S TRIP TO CAN-TON, 1902.

In the afternoon, Mr Ball and I visit the Honam Temple, or Ocean Banner Monastery, as it is also called. Archd. Gray, in his 'Walks in the City of Canton,' states that it was founded in 1662. It covers many acres: There are about 150 priests connected with it. Very dirty, slipshod, slovenly fellows they seemed, with heads shaten entirely and a sort of greasy, unwashed appearance. I saw them as they 'holy beggar,' who had his revenge, were finishing their evening meal, arrangements for preparing this and for seating the gentlemen for whom it was intended were necessarily extensive. Mr Ball then took me to the further end spoiled by tourists, who are often possessed of the grounds, through some gardens, to the crematorium, built of brick, where, after death, the priests' remains are consumed, and to the adjoining ash repositories-the latter a not very grand affair. In the gardens were ponds in which were live fish (offerings sacred to Buddha), and where water lilies and other water-flowers grew, and, on the banks, willows, &c. little bird of gorgeous gold and green plumage attracted my eye here, as it flitted about among the trees.

He would come to us every now and again, and beaming all over with good-nature, talk in an undertone with my companion. This was the best side of him, however, as he showed himself a morcenary by demanding 'cumsha' as we were about to leave, and that in a way that left no uncertainty as to his meaning. Mr Ball gave him 10 cents. He then pounced on me, and I incurred Mr Ball's displeasure by giving hin cents Mexican more, which quietthe 'saint.' It now became a race between this latter and us whether he would have up the bars which close the entrance in lieu of a door or gate before we covored the intervening distance of 100 yards or so, or we defeat his little game. He must have been a specialist, as it was surprising the speed with which his task was done. Though we 'hustled,' he was too quick for us, and when we got down he had finished his job and stood with his back to the gate facing us, demanding 'cumsha.' Mr Ball paid a trifle - he would not tell me what, but our warder not being satisfied, and starting to make a row, Mr Ball laid hold of him, and, pushing him bodily aside, pulled out one of the bars, through which I pass, Mr Ball following
